"T-R-U-B-B-E-L, Trouble, Mr. Payne," Pat Grady solemnly spelled his prediction. "I kin smell it in the air plain as I smell the rotten food in the mess shack that's causing it all. And I'm telling you now that there's no saying where it'll lead any more than I can tell where it'll end. Trouble and bad grub—they been twins from the beginning of time."

Lee Payne tapped the table thoughtfully with his pencil. A young man he was not inclined to take the matter so seriously as the old foreman of Ira Monroe's old fields, still there was no dodging the fact that the men were lately become sullen and apathetic in their work, and a few of them openly insolent.

"And you think the food at the bottom of the men's actions?"

"Their stomachs is at the bottom of it—stomachs and lack of food," Pat corrected.

"But it can easily be remedied."

"Then why ain't it?" Grady did not wait for an answer but pointed out the window silently toward a group of laborers loafing boldly beside the nearest big tank. In the center of the group a broad shouldered, swarthy, beetle browed fellow was frantically gesticulating to emphasize his remarks, reminding the two men in the office could not hear but which caused their brows to furrow anxiously.

"Brown Joe's at it again," muttered the foreman thoughtfully to himself. "And he's got the right of it this time. I tell you, Mr. Payne, I'd rather have a rattler sleeping with me than a mouthy woman crying out of that fellow and do it quick. Look at him."

Payne slowly nodded and turned back to his desk. He had only been brought to a realization of the seriousness of the situation by certain pangs in his own stomach after being nauseated by the sight and smell of the food placed before him on the breakfast table. Had it been for a long time now and worse it was steadily growing.

And the sight of those men listening to the notorious agitator as well as the wild gestures with which the man brought home his points, the significantly bowed shoulders as they inclined their heads that they might listen more closely, told Pat Grady had done well to warn him.

He glanced at his watch and felt a little tremor of anticipatory fear as he noted the noon hour was upon him. There had been open mutterings this morning. If the food had not improved for dinner, what would those mutterings become? For a half day's labor in the oil wells would conduce to making one's appetite dainty or bird-like. The situation must be improved and that immediately. If only he could gain a little time.

As the whistle summoned the men from their work he waited for them in the shack, watching them being seated at the long table, noting the furrowed brows, the somber eyes, the significance of their steady scrutiny of Brown Joe, seated next himself. That there was something afoot he could not doubt. What the something was he had no means of knowing or of guarding against. Pat Grady at the opposite side the table winked significantly as he caught the sneering, venomous expression on the face of Brown Joe—Brown Joe to whom they all evidently looked to as their leader?

None of the customary rattling of plates and cutlery, the harsh crunching of teeth in mastication; none of the sighs and grunts of voracious men gorging into the fuel that would replenish the weary muscles.

Grady gripped the ring-leader by the arm as he would have sneaked out, throwing him heavily before the young superintendent.

"You're fired," Payne snapped. "Get out, and don't wait for your time, either. I'll catch you again and then I'll not shoot at the rafter. Get me?"

The fellow slunk backwards toward the door, darting furtive glances at the foreman, who watched him threateningly, his fists swaying slightly as though nothing would delight him more than another opportunity of testing them upon the ugly visage. But as he slumped out the door there was a look in his eyes, about the corners of his mouth, the murderously low forehead that seemed to indicate he had not so thoroughly understood as the young super might have wished.

UTAH FEATURED IN RAILROAD PAMPHLET

One of the most interesting and instructive pamphlets on Utah yet written, has just been issued by the passenger department of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad. In the Denver & Rio Grande, Utah is shown in living green the "center of attraction," with all water courses, established towns and routes of travel, clearly shown. The illustrations have been chosen with care and impress the reader with the great and varied agricultural resources of this good state of ours.

The subject matter was prepared by Dr. E. G. Peterson, director of agricultural extension of the Utah Agricultural college. Dr. Peterson is so thoroughly familiar with the agricultural life of Utah that the very fact of "Lands of Utah" was written by him speaks for its reliability and authenticity. No man in Utah is better posted on the settlement and agricultural development of this commonwealth than is this man at the head of the extension work in many lines which our college is now doing for our farmers.

The pamphlet tells the reader: "The prime wealth of Utah is her never-endingly rich soil, washed down, through countless centuries, in large measure from mountains of limestone which impart to the soil the necessary chemical reaction for the best growth of plants. Magic is the word which described the productivity of the 22,000,000 acres of land capable of cultivation within the state. Chemists tell us repeatedly, and the yields verify their story, that Utah soil is the choicest in the world. Sociologists tell us that such rich soil produces compact rural settlement. Compact rural settlement presumes the development of good roads, excellent schools and churches, and other evidences of prosperity and enlightenment and a resultant rural civilization not possible under other conditions. This is the future of Utah and irrigation agriculture."

This pamphlet is not only being distributed throughout the east and mid-west by representatives of the Denver & Rio Grande and connecting lines, but thousands of copies are being obtained by the multitudes this season visiting the Panama-Pacific International exposition, San Francisco, and the Utah building at San Diego.

O. H. S. Dramatists to Present Class Play at Church

The Dramatic club of the Ogden high school class of 1914-15 which presented the Greek drama, "Pygmalion and Galatea," so successfully during commencement week, is to repeat the performance on the evening of June 23 in the Congregational church.

The object of the presentation will be to aid in the purchase of an organ for the church. The players will hold rehearsals during the week, though not much work will be necessary.

MAJOR MILES AUTHOR VISITOR IN OGDEN

L. B. Yates and his niece Miss Marie Yates, are guests of the Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Carver at their home on Adams avenue, the visitors having stopped in Ogden to renew acquaintance with the local minister. Mr. Yates is a short story writer of note, being a regular contributor to the Saturday Evening Post.

Some of his latest stories are: "The Chalk Game," "Trooping With Dan Cupid," "Major Miles and the Humming Bird," "Major Miles and the Grim Reaper" and "Major Miles and the Chickens." He is also a contributor to the Green Book magazine, his story, "Live Forever," having appeared in the June number of that publication.

The writer first became acquainted with the Rev. Carver in North Dakota 17 years ago and four years ago they met for the second time in Denver. He has a great liking for outdoor sports and this is shared by Miss Yates, who won several first prizes in New York shows for horsemanship. The two are to go from Ogden into Idaho for a hunting trip with George Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post.

BOOTH HAS VISION OF ARMAGEDDON IN PRESENT WAR

The ten auditorium, corner of Washington avenue and Twenty-sixth street, was filled to the overflowing last night. Perhaps one hundred or more were not able to obtain seats. Many war pictures were used in illustrating the study. Evangelist Booth spoke on "Europe's War Cloud." The meetings opened with enthusiasm.

The preacher said in part: "The texts show clearly that just before the final battle, when the armies of heaven will meet the armies of earth, when God and heaven refuse to permit the human family to slaughter one another further, and the Lord will come and put an end to wars for all times; the nations will be angry, and there will be great preparation and a gathering to the battle of Armageddon."

"The history of eternity does not present such conditions as obtain in Europe today. Never before has heaven looked upon so fearful a sight of armies and nations armed to the teeth bent on destruction and slaughter. Many are led to inquire, Is this the Armageddon of the Bible?"

"The prophecy of the second chapter of Daniel is of special interest to the Bible student at this time. Certain questions of vital importance are made clear relative to the outcome of the present war."

"In this second chapter the Lord has seen fit to reveal, 2,500 years ago, the nations that would rule on the earth from the days of the captivity of the children of Israel to the second coming of Christ. The symbol of an image is brought to view with four parts—head of gold, breast and arms of silver, sides of brass and legs and toes of iron and clay. The head, arms, sides of brass and legs of iron stand for the kingdoms of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Grecia and Rome. The ten toes stand for the ten parts into which the Roman empire was divided in the fourth and fifth centuries. The nations of Europe today who are engaged in conflict represent these divisions."

"The climax of the second chapter is brought to view in the forty-fourth verse, which reads, 'In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.' Thus we see that the age of monarchy will continue; and the broken parts of the Roman empire will remain till Christ comes. God will then set up His kingdom and it shall stand forever. The present war is not the Armageddon of the Bible, but there are certain moves now being made, which, according to prophecy, may involve the final conflict."

Topic tonight will be, "The Crash of Empires Foretold." The study will be illustrated with war pictures. All are cordially invited to attend.

THEATERS

"THE ETERNAL CITY."

The motion picture version of Hall Caine's great book "The Eternal City" drew large crowds to the Orpheum theatre last night and proved to be one of the most remarkable photographs that has yet been thrown on a local screen. It is fully as elaborately constructed as to staging and costuming as "Cabrera," and its initial production at the local playhouse was one of much interest.

In the graphic action of the play are seen Pauline Frederick, one of the foremost modern actresses, Thos. Holding, a prominent movie player, and an excellent cast of minor characters. In every way the production is well worth seeing.

HEALTH TALKS

BURNING INCENSE—AND MONEY.

When the element of mystery becomes essential in the development of a movie or fiction plot it is an effective scheme to picture a strange looking Oriental making passes and burning something in an urn. The idea is to suggest supernatural possibilities in the denouement.

The same thing has been worked successfully—is still worked—in connection with the public health administration of some easy-going municipalities. Likewise it is employed to fill the pockets of certain proprietary medicine manufacturers.

That fumigation is a superfluous and a needless waste of money in the work of preventing the spread of disease, has been so thoroughly demonstrated both in America and Europe that none but the stand-pat sanitarian can doubt it. That fumigation, as practiced in most cities, fails to destroy all the germs in a room has been established by more than one scientific investigator. Why fumigate then? Oh, because it looks mysterious, and it is the custom, you know.

The Real Disinfectants.

Soap and water, fresh air, sunlight, and personal isolation are the means of preventing contagion, and it is upon these things alone that safety lies. To fumigate a room after diphtheria or scarlet fever is an unwarranted extravagance under any circumstances, and a useless risk if the patient has had ordinarily intelligent care.

To burn incense for the purpose of covering an odor is a compromise with uncleanness.

To raise a smoke with the notion that it will help crowd is certainly strong evidence of faith in miracles, but it is scarcely hygienic.

Sulphur fumes, or formaldehyde may kill rats or insects, but that is no sign that it will kill germs. Certainly it will not kill the germs carried in or on the human body.

Personally, we should hate like the deuce to spend a quarter for any such buncombe in our own household, and we should dislike to have any one else waste good money that way. A quarter will buy several bars of high grade soap. It will buy one hour of labor.

There is no longer any good reason why cleanliness should not supersede smoke and queer odors. It has been found quite as effective and a whole lot more economical in at least one wide awake American city, to say nothing of the effete capitals of Europe.

Extras for the Baby.

Is orange juice good for a seven-month-old baby? The baby doesn't get enough mother's milk and we have been giving him Mellin's food. Answer—Yes. Also give the baby some clear beef or mutton broth two or three times a week. Gradually add clean, fresh milk to his diet, feeding from a spoon.

Distilled Water a Luxury.

Do you think distilled water would be good for a child who is quite contented?

Answer—Any pure drinking water would be as good.

CLEANING RADIATORS.

To make a good substitute for a radiator brush, which is rather expensive, and which is most satisfactory, merely make a bag of outing flannel to fit your carpet beater and finish on the three sides with a narrow, full double ruffle; fasten with a draw string. This cleaner can be used through either the lengthwise or crosswise sections of any radiator.

FASHIONS AND FRILLS.

Toby frills are being worn. Fashion desires flares and frills. The country hat should be of felt. Hats continue to display floating veils.

Bathing suits are fashioned with full skirts.

Do smaller the skirt the smaller the waist should be.

Snocks of all kinds are in great demand this season.

Wraps are a striking feature of the summer fashions.

The prettiest scalloped skirts are those made of taffeta.

Hat streamers have tiny posies appliqued on their ends.

Pagoda parasols are among the many sunshades shown.

The old-time shoulder cape of taffeta is worn in Paris.

Black silk frocks are being flounced with white lace.

Grosgrain and faille silks increase constantly in favor.

The newest shoes are extremely simple and unornamented. Black and white shepherd plaid is well combined with taffeta.

SUMMER FUDGE.

Cut one-half pound dipping chocolate in pieces, set saucepan in larger saucepan of boiling water, and let stand until melted. Beat two eggs until thick and add one cupful of powdered sugar gradually, while beating constantly. Add to melted chocolate, and when well blended add one teaspoonful vanilla, a few grains salt, two-thirds cupful of English walnut meats, broken in pieces. Turn into a buttered pan, and let stand to set. Cut in cubes and pile on a dish.

There are no little things in an engineer's work. The most minute task or warning has a great meaning. The lesson is plain for us, and as God trusts his Kingdom to our individual arrangement, we can do well to sit at the feet of the engineer and learn anew the lesson of fidelity.

Grimsby, England, June 13, 8:35 p. m.—The crew of the British trawler Plymouth, which was sunk by gunfire from a German submarine, landed here today. When the captain of the Plymouth sighted the submarine he cut away his gear and attempted to escape, but the submarine was too fast for his vessel.

GONZALES ORDERS ENEMY TO LEAVE

Vera Cruz, June 13.—The Democratic, the Carranza organ here, today published an extra edition containing a dispatch from Pueblo, which is in substance as follows:

"General Pablo Gonzales, who has been sent with the constitutional army to take Mexico City, has been visited by three members of the convention party from Mexico City, with an offer of an armistice. The delegates suggested that the fighting in that vicinity cease, as all the people were fighting with the same purpose."

"General Gonzales replied that the forces in Mexico City had better throw in their lot with General Carranza or evacuate the city without bloodshed. He gave the delegates forty-eight hours to return and present his proposition to the convention."

Constitutionalist headquarters here believes, that the Mexico City forces are preparing to flee and turn over the city to General Carranza. General Gonzales is said to be preparing to feed 400,000 persons.

TWO BARKS SUNK BY SUBMARINE

London, June 13, 2:35 p. m.—The British bark Crown of India, of 2,056 tons gross, carrying a cargo of coal, and the Norwegian bark Bellgrade, of 665 tons gross, timber laden, were sunk by the German submarine T-35 today off Milfordhaven, a seaport of Wales. The crews of the barks were rescued and landed at Milfordhaven. The sailors of the Crown of India said that the submarine fired several shots across the bark's bows, and when the vessel slowed down the men were ordered to take to the boats. The submarine then shelled and sank the bark. The Norwegian bark Bel-
